FLORIAN SOYARIF

I studied civil engineering but along the way I discovered that the bridges I wanted to build were between people, I decided to do it through my drawings. This is me

I am a force of nature, I have been authentic and have managed to be as close to myself as possible, now I am on the battle line, the continuous lines with which I make works serve as an analogy to say that we are all connected, and at the same time, each drawing remains as evidence of time spent expressly in observing, listening and understanding the other. Never before have we been so connected and never before have so many tools been available to so many, including myself.

I am a Cryptoartist,
 and in my world we are all connected, so I am also an ambassador for connections.

In my art each stroke is unique, unrepeatable, strokes that connect feelings, lines that unite moments, people, dreams, stories, each person is different and each stroke of my work is different as well. The interesting thing is that these strokes and drawings do not remain loose, flying; they find their habitat in my digital world.

I love to educate people in cryptoart

Because I feel that we all have something to express and technology has become a giant megaphone to communicate out ideas. So, if you want to follow my trace you can do it at:

Being authentic is the only way I can establish a real connection with others.

In this way, it could be said that my work has many edges, it cannot be conceived only as an exercise of image creation, its value lies in everything that surrounds it. My work as a cryptoartist has become the best vehicle to reach these encounters. I connect and manage to have what I define as "intellectual orgasms".

I believe in the power of love and listening, having a vision and sharing it by infecting people, I firmly believe that education with technology can transform people, communities, countries and the world.

The whole world moves, connects and lives in a parallel universe called the Internet.

We are all connected to a single trace
